List of possible texts to support the teaching of the Western Australian Curriculum: English for Years 7–10

The following list includes examples of texts that could possibly work as vehicles to support the teaching of the Western Australian Curriculum: English for Years 7 to 10.

When considering which texts to include in teaching and learning programs, teachers should take care to select texts that:

- are age appropriate
- are high quality
- have strong links to curriculum content
- are representative of wide-ranging Australian and world authors, illustrators and creators, including the works of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and Western Australian authors and creators
- support engagement with the General Capabilities, particularly Intercultural understanding, Ethical understanding and Critical and creative thinking
- support engagement with the Cross-curriculum Priorities, particularly Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' histories and cultures, Asia and Australia's engagement with Asia and Sustainability
- could be used to support content in other learning areas
- adhere to school or system policies.

Teachers should review texts before using them in their classroom to make choices regarding their appropriateness and to ensure they cater to the needs of their students. Texts in this list have been allocated to year levels on the basis of the curriculum content descriptions and teacher recommendations; however, they may not suit these year level allocations in all contexts and for all students. Some texts may be suitable for teaching the curriculum descriptions in other year levels.

This sample text list is not extensive nor mandated. It simply serves to provide teachers with a starting point from which to choose texts that support the teaching of content from the Western Australian English curriculum.

Texts marked with an asterisk (*) are by Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander writers or creators, and/or support engagement with the Cross-curriculum Priority of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' histories and cultures.
