Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander literacy to their children. The focus is on establishing literacy in the child's first language and Torres Strait Islander language, which is regarded as concordant with the child's first language. Although the child's first language is designed to be a fundamental value, the child's bilingual literacy of the child's first language contribute to improve the child's literacy skills.

While the aims of the curriculum are to support students, EAL/D students, students learning a new language and students with limited English proficiency may require additional support. The curriculum addresses their language needs and provides additional time and resources in formal settings.
