it is more usually called ethnicity. This term is used to describe linguistic, cultural and ethnic diversity in a country of the world like East Asia, Australia

The history of the Chinese language and patterns of migration of the Chinese population and experienced racism and economic reform have encouraged Australians to learn Chinese and engage with Asia

Modern Standard Chinese is the language of today. In addition, there is a process of standardisation and simplification of the Chinese language to make it easier to standardise character sets and operating systems. Simplified and traditional Chinese are used
