The first Greek people in Australia there have been written records in the early 1900s and prior to that occurred between the 18th and 19th centuries.

The modern standard form of the language is the demotic form of the language, which is used worldwide. It is an Indo-European language that remained relatively unchanged over time, with a simple syntax.

The Australian Curriculum: Languages, Modern Greek and Italian are two learning pathways for Years 7–10 (Year 7–10 for learners of different languages). The curriculum is differentiated learning to meet the needs of all learners.
